

Andrew Hill, J.D. is a Professor of Philosophy at St. Philip's College in San Antonio, Texas, where he has worked to sponsor a student Philosophy Club and Ethics Bowl Team. In academic year 2018 - 2019, he was a Fellow in the Global Studies Division of Stanford University, and in AY 2023 - 2024 he is a Fellow in the San Antonio Peace Center at Northwest Vista College.

He earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in English and Philosophy from St. Mary's University, and a Master of Arts degree in Philosophy from the University of St. Thomas. He earned the Doctor of Jurisprudence degree from the Loyola University School of Law in New Orleans, which also awarded him the Gillis Long Poverty Law Center Public Service Award.

Hill has extensive higher education experience, including four years as the head of the Service Learning Center at St. Mary's University, where he was a Senior Lecturer of law and ethics in the Graduate School. During his appointment at St. Mary's University, Hill taught courses on international legal systems and on international law & treaties for the International Relations program.

Hill also previously taught Philosophy and Ethics at Northwest Vista College, where he received the 2012 Excellence in Teaching Award in part for integrating into his courses the "Exploring Humanitarian Law" program developed by the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC). While at Northwest Vista College, he was also part of the College's International Education Committee, which received the 2012 College Service Award, and he helped to organize the 2013 Peace and Conflict Studies Summer Workshop. His work with the summer work shop and other special projects for the Peace and Conflict Studies program is why he received the NISOD Excellence Award for teaching, a national teaching honor from the College of Education at the University of Texas at Austin in 2013.

He has received several grants, including two from the Public Education for Peacebuilding Support initiative of the United States Institute of Peace, and one from the Lilly Fellows Program that funded the 2012 Lilly Fellows Program Summer Seminar for College and University Teachers, which was held at the Corrymeela Peace Centre in Northern Ireland. This was the first time that the annual Summer Seminar was held outside the United States and was titled "Teaching Peace and Reconciliation: Theory and Practice in Northern Ireland."

Hill is a long-time member, and current President, of the San Antonio Chapter of the Fulbright Association. He coordinated the 2020 Southwest Fulbright Symposium, which was held on campus at St. Philip's College for the first time. Three times he has been the Principal Contact for Academic Arrangements for the Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence at St. Philip's College (2016, 2019, 2023). In 2022, he was named an Inaugural Fulbright Scholar-In-Residence Alumni Host Mentor, providing aid and advice to current hosts of the program. As part of this service, Hill presented at the October 2022 Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence Workshop and the webinar "Alumni Impact: SIR Opportunities for Community Colleges and Minority Serving Institutions" in March 2023.

Hill has continued his involvement with the International Committee of the Red Cross, including being one of two American scholars invited to the ICRC Advanced Seminar in International Humanitarian Law for University Lecturers and Researchers, in Geneva, Switzerland in 2017. Following that experience, he revised his ethics courses, work which was recognized in 2018, when Hill again received the NISOD Excellence Award for teaching from the College of Education at the University of Texas at Austin for his innovative teaching of Ethics at St. Philip's College. In 2021, he received the Teaching Excellence Award from the Philosophy Faculty of St. Philip's College, and in 2022 & 2023, Hill received the Global Learning Faculty Award from the Alamo Colleges District.
