

Career Path for Andrew Hill, J.D.

Student Development

I began my career in higher education administration, working in enrollment management, student development, and service learning. I ultimately served for four years as head of the Service Learning Center at St. Mary's University, where I had responsibility for the budget, personnel supervision, and strategic planning for the Center.

Associate Professor of Philosophy

Fellow, Global Studies Division, Stanford University

Assistant Professor of Philosophy

Instructor of Philosophy

Director of the Service Learning Center

Senior Lecturer of Law and Ethics

Associate Director of the Service Learning Center

Lecturer of Law and Ethics

Associate Dean of Students

Associate Director of Admissions

Assistant Director of Admissions

Academic Affairs

I am now an Associate Professor of Philosophy and Ethics at St. Philip's College, and for the AY 2018 – 2019, a Fellow in the Global Studies Division of Stanford University. In 2018, I received the NISOD Excellence Award for Teaching from the College of Education at the University of Texas at Austin.